Collaborating with Faith Communities to Educate about Mental Illness

Peggy Dulaney, MSN, RN

I would like to share an idea about how we as psychiatric-mental health nurses can more actively engage with our communities. In South Carolina, the United Methodist Church is sponsoring a second large conference on the role of the church in addressing issues of mental health and illness. The first such conference was held last August in the northeastern area of the state. In March, the second conference will be held in the large, more heavily populated northwest area. The conference is open to all faith communities.

Policy Special Interest Group

Sally Raphael, MS, APRN-PMH, FAAN

The ISPN Policy SIG work moves forward with voting representation as a member of the Nursing Community Coalition (NCC) in Washington, D.C. (thenursingcommunity.org). The Nursing Community Coalition is comprised of 61 national professional nursing associations representing up to 4 million nurses dedicated to building consensus and advocating on a wide spectrum of healthcare issues, including practice, education, research, and regulation. It is committed to improving the health and health care of our nation by collaborating to support the education and practice of registered nurses (RNs) and advanced practice registered nurses (APRNs) in all fields of nursing. Business is conducted by a monthly conference call or in-person meeting at AACN in Washington, D.C.
